THE TWENTY-FIRST REGULAR SESSION OF THE UN General Assembly last week began preparations to examine and act on a wide range of problems bearing upon peace and the well-being of mankind.

The first days of work were marked by the address by President Ferdinand Marcos of the Philippines, the opening of the general debate, and a preliminary agreement on an agenda of 95 items to be given detailed consideration in the coming three months.

The agenda, approved by the Assembly's steering committee, included such issues as disarmament and peaceful uses of outer space, the representation of China in the UN, problems of decolonization and economic development, elimination of apartheid and the promotion of fundamental freedoms, development of international law, and administrative and budgetary matters of concern to the world Organization.

Two issues figured prominently in statements heard last week in the Assembly — the Secretary-Generalship of the United Nations, and the war in Viet-Nam, which although not formally on the Assembly's agenda, evoked many expressions of concern.

In his inaugural address to the Assembly, the new President, Ambassador Abdul Rahman Pazhwak of Afghanistan — said he hoped that the present session would be known as the Assembly of Reason devoted to a stronger United Nations. He called for intensified efforts to achieve disarmament, racial equality, non-intervention in the internal affairs of States, peaceful co-existence, and an economic revolution which would lead to economic and political freedom.

In a state address to the Assembly, President Marcos of the Philippines renewed a three-nation call for an all-Asian peace conference on Viet-Nam and emphasized that the Soviet Union should be one of the participants.

President Marcos recalled the USSR's successful conciliation of India and Pakistan at Tashkent earlier this year. On behalf of his own country, along with Malaysia and Thailand, he urged for a "Tashkent for South-East Asia".

As the General Assembly opened its overall general debate on Thursday, U.S. Ambassador Arthur Goldberg declared that the United States would halt bombing of North Viet-Nam and withdraw troops from the South provided Hanoi took a reciprocal action under international supervision.

Mr. Goldberg asked North Viet-Nam: Would she promise to curb her military action against the South if the U.S. first stopped bombing the North? Would she agree to a schedule...

History of Royal Welch Fusiliers

II: WATERLOO-WORLD WAR I (1815-1914)

The year 1815 was a turning point in the history of the Royal Welch Fusiliers. The Regiment had been established in 1756 as the 88th Regiment of Foot, but it had been disbanded in 1816. However, in 1815, the regiment was re-established as the 74th Regiment of Foot, and it was this regiment that fought at the Battle of Waterloo.

The regiment was commanded by General Sir John Moore, and it played a crucial role in the victory over Napoleon Bonaparte. The regiment was instrumental in the defeat of the French Army, and its bold tactics and bravery helped to secure the victory for the British forces.

The Royal Welch Fusiliers continued to serve with distinction in the 19th and 20th centuries, participating in many major conflicts, including the Boer War, the First World War, and the Second World War.

Life Savers at Xeros

DURING THE PAST WEEK, FOLLOWING A FORTNIGHT’S course, twenty-two members of Headquarters Company, 4th Infantry Group, have successfully completed a life-saving course in Xeros.

The course, combining swimming and life-saving, was organized by Sg t Paddy Madden, who is the life-saving instructor in charge of the nation’s training pool at the Army School of Physical Education. The course was attended by all of the Army’s 3rd and 9th Casualty Clearing Station teams, which won the All-Ireland Lifesaving Championships from 1949-53 inclusive.

The training took place during the past week at Blue Bay near Xeros and the course included the rules of the Irish Red Cross Society’s Water Safety Division with Red Cross Societies with HeadQUARTERS in Greece.

for a progressive withdrawal from South Viet-Nam of all outside forces, including North Viet-Namese.

Mr. Goldberg said that the US had come to the military aid of South Viet-Nam simply to help her repel aggression from the North. His Government, he said, was not engaged in an anti-Communist crusade and remained ready for unconditional negotiations and a peaceful settlement on the basis of the 1954 Geneva agreements.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, on Friday, told the General Assembly that, despite a "torrent of words" flowing from Washington destined to prove that the United States was looking for a peaceful way out of Viet-Nam, the fact remained that each "so-called peace offensive" from Washington was followed by a further escalation of aggressive actions.

Mr. Gromyko said that the statement made by US Ambassador Goldberg still amounted to a defence of his Government's aggressive course and gave no sign of its serious intent to seek a settlement. There already existed a programme for a settlement in accord with International Law, he argued, as put forward by the Hanoi Government and the South Viet-Namese National Liberation Front. It called for unconditional disengagement of US bombing of North Viet-Nam, withdrawal of US and other foreign forces from South Viet-Nam, and leaving the Viet-Namese people free to settle their own problems.

It was, he said, the duty of every State to declare its support for the Viet-Namese, denounce American aggression, and demand the withdrawal of US and allied armed forces.

Following tradition, Brazil was the first speaker in the general debate. Foreign Minister Juracy Magalhaes regretted that means to halt the Viet-Nam conflict had not yet been found. On the other hand, he said, successful peace efforts had been made in the Dominican Republic, in last year's India-Pakistan conflict, in the Palestine area, and in Cyprus. He called for a Charter revision to set forth clearly how UN peace-keeping operations should be undertaken and paid for, and stressed the need to promote an adequate rate of economic growth in under-developed countries.

BERNARDES BACK IN NICOSIA AFTER IAEA MEETINGS

Mr. CARLOS A. BERNARDES, Special Representative of the Secretary-General in Cyprus, returned to Nicosia on Sunday night after attending the Tenth Regular Session of the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna.

In a statement to the IAEA marking the occasion, Mr. Bernades recalled the "great hopes" that greeted the coming into force of the IAEA and the "stagged" problems that subsequently arose and the "tempering effects of harsh reality".

However, Mr. Bernades added, "it was encouraging to see that scientists, whatever their country of origin, can develop a common language through the dialogues from a tacit understanding of the real objectives of science in the service of mankind."

When freed from extraneous pressures, he continued, "these dedicated men tend to agree on an absolute, humanistic, supra-national view of the problem created by the ever more rapid advance of modern science."

Mr. Bernades expressed his strong hopes that the IAEA may prove to be the instrument through which one of the great achievements of science will be made to serve the peace and prosperity of all men.

The IAEA, which actually came into existence in July 1957 following the approval of its statute the previous year, has as its purposes to accelerate and enlarge the contribution of atomic energy to peace, health and prosperity throughout the world, and to ensure that assistance provided by it or at its request or under its supervision is not used in such a way as to further any military purpose.

SWEDISH EQUIPMENT FOR IAEA

THE SWEDISH GOVERNMENT has donated $20,000 worth of scientific equipment to the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA).

The 32 instruments — which include stereoscopic microscopes, intensity meters to increase the safety of handling radioactive material, and electrophoresis apparatus for agricultural, medical and hydrological research — were handed over to the Agency in Vienna by Mr. Harry A.D. Brynildsson, Swedish member of the IAEA Board of Governors.

MERCENARIES USE ANGOLA AS BASE: KINSHASA COMPLAINT

THE DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF THE CONGO has asked the UN Security Council to take up her complaint that Portugal was using Angola as a base for European mercenaries hired by the Congolese opposition headed by Mr. Moise Tshombe for the purpose of overthrowing the lawful Congolese Government.

In the event of such an attack, the Congo said, she would consider herself at war with Portugal.
