Technical supervision is being effected by Mr Carlos Georgiou, and Sgt Jack Green ACC. The third cook's hat belongs to Pte Michael Dick, ACC of Peterborough, who celebrated his 21st birthday only 10 days ago. Carlos has been an Army cook for 13 years of which some time was spent in Aden.

UN ASSEMBLY HAILS BIRTH OF SOUTHERN YEMEN REPUBLIC

The UN General Assembly, currently meeting at UN Headquarters in New York with the participation of all 122 States members of the Organisation, last week wished Aden peace and prosperity upon its accession to independence as the People's Republic of Southern Yemen following 126 years of British rule.

Expressing hope that South Arabia would consolidate its independence in unity and harmony, the Assembly reaffirmed the unity and territorial integrity of the whole territory, including Perim and other off-shore islands and spoke out against any action aimed at disrupting it.

Taking exception to reference of the islands, Great Britain said she had just taken decisions based on the expressed wishes of the islanders. Accordingly, Perim and other islands would remain with the new Republic, but Kurla-Muria would revert to the Sultanate of Muscat. A number of African-Asian delegates said this bore out their warnings of British intentions to dismember the territory.

S. YEMEN APPLIES FOR UN MEMBERSHIP

UN Secretary-General, UN Thant, received last Monday an application from the newly-formed Peoples Republic of Southern Yemen for membership in the United Nations. The application was in the form of a cable signed by President Qahtan Assabbi of the People's Republic of Southern Yemen, which became independent on 30 November after 128 years of British rule.

CYPRUS, GREECE, TURKEY RESPOND TO S.G. APPEAL

Following two weeks of intensive international consultation on the recent crisis over Cyprus, the UN Secretary-General, UN Thant, on Sunday last, formally proposed that Greece and Turkey act immediately to end any military threat against each other or Cyprus — and as a first step, promptly withdraw from the Island their forces in excess of the limits agreed to in 1960.

UN Thant also suggested that subject to UN Security Council approval — the mandate of the UN Peace-Keeping Force in Cyprus be enlarged so as to give it broader functions in regard to the realization of quiet and peace in Cyprus. He thought its broader functions could include supervising disarmament and deviseing "practical arrangements" to safeguard internal security, "for the benefit of all people of Cyprus". The Secretary-General said his "good offices" would be available for this purpose.

UN CYPRUS REPLY

Cyprus on Monday last, provided a detailed and largely favorable answer to the Secretary-General's peace appeal which had been immediately accepted by Greece and Turkey.

In his letter, President Makarios said the pull-out of Greek and Turkish Forces over 1960 levels should be a 'first step' towards the complete withdrawal of all non-Cypriot armed forces other than the United Nations Force, currently numbering about 4,600 men. Archbishop Makarios welcomed UN Thant's appeal for the prompt ending of any military threat in the area.

MORE UN OBSERVERS FOR SUEZ CANAL AREA

UN Secretary-General, UN Thant, has announced that, following consultations with the Governments concerned, he has begun recruiting for 47 additional UN observers from countries acceptable to both the United Arab Republic and Israel, to serve in the Suez Canal sector.

The Secretary-General recommended to the Security Council last October that additional observers be sent to the Canal sector.

At the same time, he suggested that arrangement be made for UN helicopters and water patrols to supplement ground observers. In his latest report, he states that consultations with the parties are continuing on these questions.

GREECE AND TURKEY

The previous day, Sunday evening, both Greece and Turkey accepted the Secretary-General's proposals made earlier that day, and promised to carry them out expeditiously.

Prime Minister Demirel of Turkey also recorded his full support.

ASSEMBLY SEeks DEFINITION OF ‘AGGRESSION’

The question of defining aggression continued to capture the interest of the UN General Assembly last week as a number of speakers representing different parts of the world participated in the general debate on this matter.

France spoke of the complexity of the problem and of the divergence of views as to what constituted aggression, and said the matter of legal definition was all the more delicate as the Security Council remained sovereign to determine whether or not aggression had taken place. France emphasized that the definition would have to have the support of the vast majority of the UN membership, including the members primarily responsible for the maintenance of peace.

Hungary, Syria, the United Arab Republic and Iraq urged intensified efforts to arrive at a definition, arguing that this would help the UN to identify an aggressor and serve as a deterrent: for example, the US bombing of North Viet-Nam and Israeli occupation of Arab territory were cited as instances of aggression pointing up the need for definition.

Canada argued that the United Nations Charter left it to competent UN organs to decide what constituted an act of aggression, and that the definition would more likely interfere with rather than assist the Security Council in carrying out its functions.

UN POLITICAL COMMITTEE CALLS FOR NEW ANTI-NUCLEAR STEPS

The Main Political Committee of the 122-nation UN General Assembly currently meeting at UN Headquarters in New York, last week called for further and urgent consideration of the question of the banning of use of atomic weapons.

The Committee asked that the Soviet draft Convention and any other proposals be taken up in an international conference, in the 18-nation Geneva Disarmament Committee, or in direct negotiations between States. A resolution with these provisions, sponsored by the Soviet Union and nine other States, was adopted by 56 in favor, none against, and 33 abstentions.

In the last group of votes were those of the three Western nuclear Powers—the United States, Great Britain and France. They hold that, in the absence of effective and supervised nuclear disarmament, the prohibition of the use of atomic weapons would be unrealistic, would compromise mutual deterrence, and would foster dangerous illusions. The Soviet position is that such a ban would be of definite value in itself—the Geneva accord against poison gas and germ warfare being a precedent —and would also facilitate further disarmament progress.

CYPRUS CRISIS ....

for enlarging the mandate of the United Nations Force in Cyprus and enabling it to supervise disarmament. This, he said, should extend to all forces constituted since 1963. The Turkish Prime Minister said general disarmament was indispensable for the security of the Turkish Community outnumbered four to one by Greek Cypriots. Mr Demirel also declared that measures urged by the Secretary-General could not affect the validity of existing treaties nor prejudice a final solution to the Cypriot dispute.

The Secretary-General met on Monday afternoon with the ten nations furnishing military contingents to UNFICYP. A United Nations spokesman said in New York that this was not related to the recent crisis: such talks normally followed normal information reports to the Security Council asking for an extension of the Force’s mandate, the current one expires 26 December. No date has been set for the Security Council to consider the extension of UNFICYP’s mandate.

UTHANT DEPLORES WORLD NUCLEAR ARMS RACE

U Thant, UN Secretary-General, last week deplored the continuing nuclear arms race and stressing the greatest potential of atomic energy in peaceful uses.

U Thant’s views were set in a statement issued on the occasion of the 25th anniversary of the first controlled nuclear chain reaction, which occurred in the United States during World War II. The Secretary-General said that despite the yearnings of mankind and the great efforts within and outside the United Nations, significant progress had not been made towards the ending of the atomic arms race and the eventual elimination of nuclear armaments. He remarked that armories now in existence were sufficient to wipe out the people of the world many times over.

On the other side of the ledger, U Thant said remarkable progress had been made in the peaceful utilization of the atom in fields such as medicine, agriculture, power, and industry — and that the full range of atoms for peace was only now coming into view.

INDUSTRIAL SYMPOSIUM OPENS IN ATHENS

A world-wide dialogue between the developed and developing countries on issues and problems of industrialization began in Athens on last Wednesday, November 29, where the first International Symposium on Industrial Development opened under the auspices of the United Nations.

The major topics of the agenda included the diversity of world industry, with special reference to developing countries; an examination of the situation in key industrial sectors; questions of industrial policies and measures used in developing countries; and an analysis of the UN’s role in the international development.
