ANZAC Day 2015

This year's dawn service, led by the Australian contingent of UNFICYP's Police component, marked 100 years since the landing of allied troops at Gallipoli in World War One. At Wayne's Keep Cemetery in the buffer zone in Nicosia, the UNFICYP family and international community, including the Australian High Commission and New Zealand Honorary Consulate, gathered to pay their respects and honour the sacrifices of those who lost their lives in the 1915 campaign. ANZAC Day is an Australian and New Zealand tradition, one of the most important national days for the two southern neighbours. Australian police have served as UN blue berets in Cyprus since 1964 - the longest-running overseas police deployment for Australian officers.
